INTEGRATED PRACTICE 1

PRACTICE FOR FIRST MID-TERM TEST

a) In the text below, you will find a question posted in a blog and a reader's answer. From 1 to 5, circle the right verb form.From 6 to 10, circle the right connector.

"I was rejected by 10 companies. I think I am not good at describing myself. The last time I [1] leave - left - was left an interview room I realized I [2] didn't speak - wasn't spoken - hadn't spoken about my personality traits correctly. What should I do?"

All I can tell you is that a good answer [3] bases - based - is based on the understanding of why the question [4] is asked - asks - ask.

First, your answer must start with a simple and clear characteristic. Here are some positive characteristics: you can mention you are creative, motivating, reliable, flexible, and committed.

Now, you should choose a word that's positive but authentic and true to your personality. You [5] aren't wanted - don't want - doesn't want to use negative or passive words to describe yourself in this situation. For example, some negative words to avoid include: reckless, unhelpful, insecure.

It's also important to add a justification. You don't just want to give a list of characteristics [6] therefore - so - as it can be boring. Simply saying you are "creative" is not enough. [7] However - Therefore - After , it's a good idea to include a descriptive justification. You could say something like this: "I'm empathetic and focused on solutions. For example, [8] before - besides - after my previous work team had lost their job, I created a group for us to work together. [9] What's more - However - As , I led that team for a time and we grew as a start-up company very quickly. [10] As - Therefore - However , I can say I'm a motivating professional and a potential team leader."

b) Make Wh- Questions about the following extract. Underline and number the answers in the extract.

Natural chicle is made from the coagulated milky latex of the sapodilla tree, a tropical fruit tree of Central America. After World War II, chicle was virtually replaced by various waxes, plastics, and synthetic rubber in chewing gum manufacture. Artificially sweetened chewing gum found a wide market in the United States beginning in the late 20th century and mint remained the favourite among a wide variety of flavours.
